Jasper High Nine Defeats Addison

Friday, May 20th, the baseball team of Jasper Central School was visited by the baseball team of Addison High School. The visitors lost to Jasper by a score of 12 to 14. The Jasper boys fought against the big lead of the Addison boys until the fifth inning when George Hopper, Addison mound-man went to pieces, he was replaced by Wade, who did fine work for a young lad, but not good enough to keep the Jasper boys from using the opportunity given them by Hopper.

The mound-men for Jasper were Trixy Francis, who pitched a good game until he went wild in the first of the fifth inning. He was replaced by Harold Stewart, who had kept the Addison boys from scoring for seven innings on their own diamond, when Jasper played there April 30, and proved too much for the visitors, enabling Jasper to defeat them.

ODD FELLOWS TO GIVE BENEFIT DANCE FRI. NIGHT

Members of the I. O. O. F. are giving a charity dance in the Odd Fellows hall Friday evening, May 27 for the benefit of the Boy Scouts. The proceeds will be used to buy suits for the boys who are unable to purchase them.

Members of the orchestra will donate their service and all other services connected with the dance are given without charge.

Members of the Rebekah lodge will serve lunches.

Many Visited Painting Demonstration

A successful demonstration of decorating with water spar paints was put on at the office of the J. S. Park Lumber Company the first two days of this week. More than 200 people including the members of the Home Economics, the Training Class and the Art Class of Addison High School, watched the interesting work shown.

The demonstration was conducted by Mrs. Barry from the office of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. Paint was sprinkled on the surface of a tub of warm water in different combinations, and vases and lamps and other household articles were dipped in the tub to obtain a wide variety of pleasing color schemes. Over two barrels of vases and lamps were colored and sold. So great was the demand that Mr. Park's supply became exhausted early in the demonstration, making it necessary to replenish the stock from nearby towns.

Those witnessing the demonstration were taught by Mrs. Barry how to do the coloring themselves.

Reuben Coon of Jasper was in town the first of the week.

The ladies of the Baptist Church will hold a tureen dinner in the church parlors Friday, May 27.

The men are urged to attend and assist in the cutting of a tree for the church.

Addison Boy Scouts In Outdoor Rallies

Regular meeting held last Thursday at Headquarters, Assistant Scout Master Rev. J. V. Axtell laid out details for Camporee in Corning, June 3, 4 and 5. The Scouts will camp for these three days at Pyrex Park and attend their first out-of-door rally with all other troops of Steuben County and Northren Pennsylvania.

Saturday the troop went on a hike north of Addison where twenty-eight boys took their fire, cooking and tracking tests. After tests the rest of the day was spent in the woods.

Last Monday a special troop meeting was called to arrange plans for Memorial Day. Camporee plans were finally made as for tents and meals.

Monday afternoon the Scouts mowed the grammar school grounds and will complete the job this week.

The next regular meeting will be held tonight at headquarters at 7:30. Board of Review and Troop Committee will be guests at the meeting.

Decker Long, Lawrence Gardner and Edward Auringer have been taken into the troop as new recruits.

MUSICAL TREAT ENJOYED

* * *

At the close of the lecture given by Prof. LeRoy B. Campbell, Sunday evening, friends were given a musicial treat at the home of Mr. and Mr. Lloyd Brotzman, where they enjoyed several piano selections by Mr. Campbell, also tales of his visit to Africa. Those present were Mr. and Mrs Henry Austin and daughters, Verda, Onnolee and Elaine of Canisteo, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Osgood, Mrs. Frank Campbell, Warren, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brotzman, Jasper; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tew, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Bebout, Mr. and Mrs. Parke Boyde, Marie Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Dyer, son Alfred, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Brown, Mrs. Mary Brown, Mrs. Eva Hotaling, Mrs. Mary Wheeler, the honor guest, Mr. Campbell, and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Brotzman, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Van Skiverand Barbara Van Skiver.

Elkland Plays Addison Decoration Day

Addison and Elkland will lock horns in a Tri-County League game at Tuscarora Field on Decoration Day afternoon, immediately following the conclusion of the exercises of the day. The game is scheduled for three o'clock, but will not be held before the completion of the exercises of the day at the cemetery, in order to give those attending the observance an opportunity to attend the game. Addison got away to a bad start last week in the game against Wellsboro, but much better things can be expected against Elkland. Staff Whitmore is expected to be home from Syracuse to play and a couple of other experienced players will probably be in the lineup.

Addison will play in Coudersport Sunday, May 29, and the pitching selection for Monday will depend on the happenings of Sunday. There is also a chance that Clarence Bennett may be on the job for his old team mates. In which case he and Baker should hitch up in one of their old time battles, as Baker is pretty likely to be Manager Freburg's selection for the Elkland boxwork. The Addison team showed lack of practice last week, but that fault is being remedied this week and the locals should take the field Decoration Day ready to play midseason ball, with all their old time snap and speed.

The usual big holiday crowd is sure to be in Addison for Decoration Day and the calling of the game after all the exercises of the day have been completed will give all an opportunity of seeing the game. There is ample parking space at the field for all cars, and everything is in readiness for a royal welcome to the old rivials from across the state line.

Troupsburg Wins From Woodhull

The Woodhull base ball team played the Troupsburg team at the latter place last week, Wednesday. The Troupsburg team was victorious by a score of 6 to 2. Those playing on th team were Bernard Hallet, Donald Olin, Gerald Olin, Donald Preston, Ellison Hotaling Orville Van Skiver, Seward Heckman, Perry Cornell, Andrew Cornell, Craig Munson. Accompanying them were Prof. Frank Minckler, the Misses Geraldine Card, Myrtle Owens, Ermyne Wheatcraft, Gertrude Olin and and garet Leach and Elwyn Hotaling, Radcliffe Olin, Carl Andrews and Lawrence Thomas.

Van Zile No. 1, Is Fourteenth Gas Producer In Local Field

Well owned by Linderman-Crane and Tri-State struck initial flow in the Wright sand Saturday—Drilling at 1160 Wednesday—Expected to finish at 1400 feet—Newcomb No. 1 still shut down.

The Van ile No. 1, fourteenth producer in the Rathbone fields near Addison, struck a flow of gas last Saturday. The first pay of the Wright sand was tapped by the drill at a depth of approximately 900 feet, a fine flow of gas resulting. Drilling has continued with a few small additions to the flow, the bit having reached a depth of 1160 feet when this paper went to press.

The well will be sunk to a depth of about 1400 feet near which the big pay Wright sand is expected to come in. This well has proceeded rather slowly the past week, the drillers encountering some extemely hard formations at times similar to what was drilled through on the Alvah Allen discovery well which is in an almost direct line east of the Van Zile. So hard are some of these formations that the bit is often pounded badly out of shape in going through less than a foot of rock. These hard cap rocks are held by the drillers to be a good sign for the final strong production of the well. E. H. Stone is the drilling contractor on this well.

The Van Zile No. I. is owned by Tri-State and Linderman-Crane. It is Linderman-Crane's second well in the field, their first hole the Sherwood, No. 1. having been drilled by Clyde Campbell and coming in with a flow of fine grade oil at 815 feet, later being drilled deeper and coming in with a good flow of gas in the Wright sand. Mr. Crane has indicated that the firm's next location might be near the Sherwood well to further test the oil bearing sands tapped there.

The Newcomb well, first producer in the East Rathbone field towards Addison, is still shut down. Hammondsport Gas Company and local interests, who own the Newcomb, No. 1, have stated drilling will probably be resumed the last of this week of the first of next to drill on down to the Wright sands.

Work on the Pooley well near Campbell continued steadily this week with the hole approaching a depth of 2,000 feet. Excitement is strong around the Campbell as lessors have been bidding against each other to tie up every acre of available land near the well. Success in the Pooley well will greatly boom the chances of finding gas in the Oriskany here, as the well is just north of Addison.

CHILD BITTEN BY FERRET

Harry, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Risley, was bitten in the face by a ferret, while visiting his aunt in Almond, Sunday.

The young lad had gone to the box where the ferret was kept and when the cover came off the box the ferret jumped into his face. He was brought to this place Monday for treatment, but it was feared infection had developed.

Dairymen's League Meeting Saturday

The Addison Local of the Dairymen's League will hold a meeting in Addison Grange Hall at 8:00 P. M., Saturday. A delegate and associate delegate will be elected to attend the annual meeting in Syracuse June 16-17. Ballots will be cast for the county president of the organization. Refreshments will be served.

Smart Boy

Robert Spencer Whitlow, 17, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, who won a free trip to Geneva for knowing more about the League of Nations than any other of 10,000 high school boys who competed.

Interesting Lecture Given in M. E. Church

Prof. LeRoy B. Campbell of Warren, Pa., gave a very interesting lecture on Temperance in the M .E. Church, Sunday evening.

Mr. Campbell is known by many in this place and is a cousin of W. J. and Harry Brotzman and Mrs. Otto Van Skiver whom he visited. He is a talented musician and traveler, having crossed the Atlantic fourteen times and made a complete trip around the world.

In bringing this temperance lecture, Mr. Campbell gave many new thoughts on the much-discussed topic. He began by giving the reason for the desire of alcoholic drinks, leading up to the fact that people in the fast age of today have insufficient time for proper rest, thereby seeking rest through the brain by drink.

He gave proof to his audience that the 18th amendment wasn't to take away a free man's rights but to protect the large per cent whose mentality is that of a 13 year old child, who needs protection, also that the crime wave of today is a result of the World War and not of the 18th amendment.

RUTH VAN WIE ENTERTAINS CLASS

Miss Ruth Van Wie assisted by Miss Eleanor Andrews entertained the teacher and members of the Sunbeam class of the Baptist Sunday school at her home, Friday evening.

After a pleasant evening of games and lesson study, refreshments were served to Mrs. Elmer Hackett and the Misses Esther Herrington, Carmen Hackett, Frances Bebout, Winifred Munson, Doris Brown, Mrs. R. L. Andrews, Mrs. Bert Van Wie, Gerald Van Wie and the hostesses, Ruth Van Wie and Eleanor Andrews.

Plans Developing Rapidly For Old Home Week At Cameron Mills

Great interest has been manifested by local people and former residents of Cameron Mills over the Old Home Week which will be celebrated July 4. A meeting was held May 15 at which a fine representation from the various committees worked harmoniously to perfect the organization.

James Crawford was elected chairman of the organization. Dr. A. P. Goff was elected president and general chairman over all the committees. A motion was carried that the suggestions proposed by Dr. Goff regarding committees be adopted. The names of Mrs. J. L. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Dell Orr, Harry Sanford, Leroy Thompson, Earl Thompson and Miss Grace Evans were added to the executive committee.

It was moved and carried that George H. Lewis act as treasurer of the organization. Ruth R. Crawford was elected secretary.

A motion was made and carried that Archie Lloyd act as chairman of the band with John Kinney and Homer Cole to assist him.

The following were appointed to take charge of the sports: Lloyd Reynolds, chairman; Ward Martin and Harry Dascomb.

Motion was made and carried that J. A. Hovey, William Crawford and Melvin Bromley act as a committee for publicity.

Motion made and carried that all names and addresses of people to be notified be sent to the secretary and she send notices to same.

The following committee was appointed to have charge of the fireworks: James Crawford, William Dascomb and Ray Angel.

Motion was made and carried that Brother Eugene Cole be asked to give the address of welcome.

AMERICAN LABOR SPEAKS

The following statement by the Railroad Labor Organizations won considerable applause thruout the country:

"1. A depression begins and is prolonged by productive facilities that are too great for the buying power of the markets. Reduced purchasing power accenturates the condition.

"2. The interdependence of the United States and foreign countries economically is now for the first time in history so great that the United States cannot expect to recover from this depression while ignoring the difficulties of foreign countries.

"Our exports at the present time are running at the annual rate of a billion, five hundred million dollars, or at levels not seen since 1904, whereas in 1927 our exports amounted to four billion, eight hundred million dollars.

"Our industries and our railroads, therefore, have lost well over three billion dollars in the annual rate of export trade—and it is a well known fact that a little pressure can start a long chain of unfortunate events—or a long chain of happy events. When our industries and our railroads lose over three billion dollars annually, of their markets, it not only has an adverse effect upon the workers, but wipes out a substantial part of their profits."

"We have concluded that the pressure from War Debts operates as follows: Foreign countries should have paid us in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932, about two hundred and fifty millions of dollars under the Young Plan."

"This two hundred and fifty million dollars is not much larger than the annual Post Office deficit in the United States, which our people have never worried about very much. Why, under such conditions, do we shout: 'But a loan is a loan and a contract is a contract?' Why do we talk about having loaned in good faith and the sanctity of agreements to repay? Why should we continue to frantically demand that pound of flesh which is closest to the heart? Why should we demand that flesh closest to the heart of our brother laborers abroad when at the same time it means the ruination of our own earning power, our own economic system and the ruination of the American Home?"

"Does the National pride and honor require us to spend ten to forty dollars in order to collect one dollar? Does the National pride and honor require us to starve our wives and children? Does the National pride require us to continue to suffer greater and greater hardships indefinitely? Does the National honor require all of America — laborers, farmers, white collar workers, industrial and transportation organizations to plunge headlong into greater suffering and disorder?"

"No—it does not!"

Viewed in this light, it may be we are taking the attitude of the business man who willingly spends five dollars to collect one, in order to keep his credit reputation on a high plane.

It is true that two hundred and fifty million dollars is a drop in the bucket of the American treasury WHEN THERE IS PROSPERITY. But at a time like this when taxpayers are already groaning under the load, it is a huge sum.

One thing is certain; before the United States consents to any cancellation of war debts we should dictate world disarmament measures that really mean something. American citizens have little stomach for allowing Europe to crawl out of her obligations in order to have funds to keep the main powers armed to the teeth.

IS AN ECONOMY INVESTIGATION

Despite the fact that it has been plainly stated several times, many people do not yet seem to fully grasp the idea that the investigation of State departments now under way in Albany by the Hewitt Committee has for its purpose not the discovery of official wrongdoing, but the means by which public expense may be reduced. While no public announcement to that effect has been made, it is understood the committee will give careful attention to all information along this line. If in the pursuit of this purpose there should develop any evidence of wrongdoing, it is hardly likely that it would be ignored. But the first purpose of the committee is to recommend methods of reducing State expenses, and to that end it is devoting tis efforts.

IT IS WORKING

Testifying before a Congressional Committee on April 21, General Charles G. Dawes, head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, stated that in the period from February 2, the first day of its operation, to April 19 inclusive, the Corporation had authorized loans to 1,520 banks, loans and trust companies in the United States in the amount of $243,248,769, of which amount $10,047,158 has already been paid. These figures include sixty-seven loans, aggregating $5,994,300, authorized in connection with the reorganization or liquidation of closed banks.

General Dawes pointed out the fact that during the last two years deposits to the aggregate amount of 9 billion dollars had been withdrawn from the banks of the country, and this reduction of deposits was still continuing at an alarming rate when Congress passed the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act. The evidence of the effectiveness of the Corporation's work is found in the fact that during the seventy-one days which preceded February 2, 756 banks with $1,521,000,000 deposits suspended in the United States, while in the seventy-one days from February 2, when the Reconstruction Finance Corporation started its operations, to April 12, there suspended this country only 182 banks—less than one-fourth as many as in the preceding seventy-one days—having $79,744,000 deposits, an amount less than one-sixth as much as those in the preceding seventy-one days. In addition, during the latter seventy-one days, with the assistance in many cases of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, 79 failed banks with $36,520,000 deposits have reopened. Thus the net failures represented only $43,224,000, or less than 8 per cent of the amount in the same period preceding. General Dawes declared that the general withdrawal of bank deposits is stopped and hoarded money to the extent of 250 million dollars has been returned during the period since the initiation of the operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Answering the criticism to the effect that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation favors large banks as against small ones, General Dawes pointed out that during the period from February 2 to April 12, 69.2 per cent of the banks which have borrowed mony from the Corporation are located in towns of less than 5,000 population and 88.9 per cent of the borrowing banks are located in towns of 25,000 or less. No loans have been made to any of the great banks in New York City.

And so the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is functioning precisely as President Hoover said it would when he submitted the plan to Congress.

MEMORIAL DAY

Next Monday, May 30th, is the day observed in forty-two of the forty-eight states, and in all of the territories of the United States, as Memorial Day. It is the day upon which the nation pays tribute to its honored dead, who served their country at the peril of their own lives. Originally established in the North as the day for decorating the graves of soldiers who had lost their lives in the war between the states, Memorial Day has practically lost its sectional significance; for North and South alike contributed the heroes of the Spanish War and of the great World War, whose memories are preserved with special ceremonial on this day. In the South in the states of the old Confederacy, where another date is still set apart in commemoration of the men who wore the gray, the 30th of May is now largely observed as the national day of commemoration for all of the brave.

It is meet and fitting that at least once a year the nation should be reminded that our country has had, from its inception, to fight for the liberties, the rights and privileges which we, more than any other people in the world, enjoy so greatly. The seeds of that liberty have been sown in the blood of heroes. We make a great fuss about hard times. We complain with bitterness about our personal business and financial worries. But all the troubles that we in time of peace are compelled to bear are insignificant compared with the risk of life itself, which every man who has served under our flag has accepted cheerfully, even jubilantly. There is no tribute too great to pay to those who proved their willingness to make that sacrifice if necessary. To whom do we raise monuments but to these?

Let us, then, who are still living, unite on the 30th of May to praise these illustrious dead, and at the same time let us renew our tacit pledge that they have not died in vain, that the nation which they fought to save shall proceed forever onward toward a higher and more glorious destiny.

INCOME TAXES MUCH REDUCED

The period for paying personal income taxes either in whole or in part expired April 15 and the State officials now have a pretty good idea what they will amount to this year. Their estimate is $40,000,000. Of this $28,000,000 has been paid in, the remainder to come in installments as permitted by law. An idea how incomes have dropped may be gained from the fact that in 1930, with the rate only half as high as at present, the total was $81,500,000. The cities, towns and villages, which receive half of the tax, will be relatively worse off than the state, since they share only in the original tax, the 100 per cent increase made by the Legislature being a special emergency levy, all of which goes into the State coffers. Thus instead of receiving some $40,000,000 as in 1930, the cities, towns and villages will this year get about $10,000,000. High tide in income taxes in this state was reached in 1929, when the total receipts were nearly $85,000,000.

How, What and Why?

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York state college of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges.

Address your queries to How, What and Why, Room 201, Roberts Hall, Ithaca, N. Y.

The Milk Committee

A. D. B. asks: "What is the emergency [illegible] committee of the New Yo[illegible] and what does it plan to do?"

The committee of nine members was selected from the county committees of all dairy counties, and has six representatives from New York state and one each from Vermont, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. It announces that all of the producers' interests are represented in this group which, it says, was formed to help raise the milk price for all dairymen by sponsoring a move for one big cooperative organization. The plan, as proposed by the committee, is to send no more milk to cities than consumers want; to manufacture surplus milk in the country; and to cut distribution costs.

Fertilizer Facts

Mrs. M. V. D. writes: We are going to make a small vegetable garden this year. What kind of fertilizer would be best? If manure is used, should it be put on in the spring or fall?"

No fertilizer is better than well-rotted manure. If it is old manure it may be put on either in the spring or in the fall. If it is fresh, it should be put on in the fall.

I am sending you a copy of our Extension Bulletin 74 which will give you reliable information.

More About Moths

C. R. H. asks: "If 'paradi' crystals are those used with a vacuum cleaner?"

The paradichlorobenzene crystals are not used in connection with the vacuum cleaners. The best way to get the full value of these crystals is to put them in a cheesecloth bag and confine them in an air-tight box or trunk with the garments or fabrics which are to be protected from the moths.

Where to Sink Wells

O. B. asks: "Will you please give me information in regard to locating and digging wells in very rocky ground, and what treatment is required to make rain water, caught in a cistern or tank, fit for domestic use?"

Professor B. B. Robb of the college of agriculture says that the best place to drill a well is where it will be most convenient, rather than to rely on methods of water-finding devices such as divining-rods, witch-hazel wands and the like.

Water caught in cisterns should pass through several wire screens overlaid with charcoal during its descent from the roof to the cistern. This will remove major impurities, but cistern water should not be used for drinking. It is excellent for washing purposes because it is so soft. Nevertheless, it has many impurities because it washes from roofs and eaves-troughs. These cannot be kept thoroughly clean.

Cistern water boiled would not be harmful but it would not be palatable.

The Way of Life
By BRUCE BARTON

UNKNOWN

Buried in the middle of the second volume of Lincoln Steffens' autobiography are some paragraphs on education for which I extend my thanks.

"Thinking back over my school and college courses," he says, "I could see that one trouble with our education was that it did not teach us what was not known, not enough of the unsolved problems of the sciences, of the arts, and of life.

"It gave us positive knowledge where there was no certain knowledge, and worst of all, when we did not particularly want it. We were not curious as students, and we are not curious enough now as men and women.

"It seemed to me . . . that curiosity was the begining and end of education."

If a copy of this paper happens to fall into the hands of a college president, I should like to suggest to him the establishment in his college of a lecture course on The Unknown.

The first lecture might be by a professor of physics. He would doubtless start by dropping a paper weight on the desk, saying, "That is something which no human being understands. We call it 'gravitation,' but no man in the world knows what gravitation is."

The second lecturer might well be a professor of economics. He would have to say something like this: "We do not know why good times come or why they leave. We have many impressive phrases in our business. We speak of 'gold supply' and 'commodity prices' and 'speculation,' and so forth. We make many charts. These charts only tend to show hat what goes up must come down and that history has a way of repeating itself. But why it repeats itself, we really do not know."

The third lecturer, of course, should be a philosopher or a theologian. He would say: "No one knows how the universe started or what is its object. Some men call themselves philosophical pessimists and pretend to know that it has no meaning. Some of us prefer to believe that it has a Maker and a meaning. We feel that this positive faith gives life more significance, more cheer."

Such a lecture course would cure the colleges of afflicting the world with wise young men. The graduates would be humble, curious, thrilled by the challenge of so much to learn, so many things to try.

Also, they would understand why no man needs to be ashamed to say: "I do not know, but I believe."

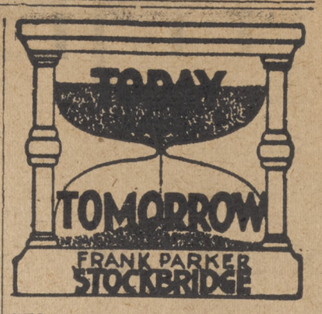
JOSEPH THE DREAMER

Genesis 37:1-11
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Four lessons of unusual interest are devoted to the life of Joseph. He was the son of Jacob and the beloved wife Rachel. A second son of Rachel was Benjamin and the mother died in child birth. We have seen her reputed tomb just a short distance below Jerusalem toward Bethlehem. It will save a lot of trouble at the start if you will commit to memory the names of the twelve sons of Jacob, following the order of their birth; such as Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah—sons of Leah, etc.

Again we find favoritism in the home, for Jacob makes more of Joseph than of the other sons. This they resent, especially when the father bestows a coat with sleeves to Joseph, suggesting that he is more of a gentleman than others, for one who wears sleeves is not a man of physical toil. However, we do find Joseph in the fields with the sons of Bilhah and Zilpah, concubines of Jacob.

Here we have the first record of dreams by this man who later prophesied through dreams in Egypt. First, the sheaf of Jacob moved from the shock and received the obeisance of the sheaves that represented the eleven brothers. Later the same purport was expressed in the dream in which in the starry heavens honor was done to Joseph and in this the father, represented by the bowing sun, participated. This doubling of the dream added fire to the flame of envy and jealousy already so well started. While God can still make His will and ways known to us in dreams we must not declare that each dream bears a message from God. The source may be merely a matter of indigestion. It is wise to weigh each impression and be ready to be taught where there is a lesson to be gained.



SIN

I heard a new definition of "sin" the other night. With my wife, I went to a meeting of the Oxford Group Movement, which is better known in America as "Buchmanism" from the name of the Rev. Dr. Buchman, one of its leaders. An audience that packed the ballroom of one of New York's largest fashionable hotels came to hear what many recent converts had to say.

It was an amazing meeting in many ways, particularly because of the total absence of self-consciousness on the part of those who told how they had found new happiness in the full acceptance of old teachings. But the definition which interested me was this:

"Sin is whatever comes between yourself and God, or between yourself and others."

I've been ruminating that ever since, and it stands up. It widens the category of sin, as usually accepted, considerably; but it sets a standard which, if lived up to by everybody, would certainly make the world a lot happier place to live in. Think it over.

FROG

The most famous frog in the world was the "Jumping Frog of Calaveras", hero of one of Mark Twain's early stories. That frog's name was Daniel. His successor, the winner of the annual Calaveras County, California, frog-jumping contest, both last year and this, is named Budweiser. Budweiser jumped 13 feet, 5 inches this year and won a $100 prize for his owner.

Frog-jumping contests may not seem important to people who are worrying about how to pay their rent. On the contrary, entertainment, anything which brings about mental relaxation and momentary forgetfulness of one's personal worries, is important in exact proportion to its triviality. If there is anything more trivial than watching frogs jump, I don't know what it is.

We would all be beter off if we would ease up every little while from the pursuit of the elusive dollar and just sit around and watch the frogs jump.

DOLLAR

Captain Robert Dollar, who died at the age of 88 the other day, was one of the great men of the world. A poor Scotch boy, he came to America, worked in the Canadian lumber camps, came to the United States at the head of his own lumber business, needed ships to carry his lumber, so he bought them and learned to operate them himself. He was the largest individual shipowner in the world when he died, and his ships were run on the old fashion system under which, if nobody else had a return cargo for one of them, the captain would buy a shipload of merchandise on the owner's account.

"Never came home in ballast", was one of his rules for his captains. Another was "Never cheat a Chinaman." That last gave him preference in all Chinese ports over all other shipping lines. He originated the idea of around the world tours and every two weeks one of his ships starts out for a voyage around the world.

Rigid honesty and minute attention to every detail of his own business were the keynotes of Captain Dollar's success. Nobody has yet discovered any better way of getting ahead in the world.

VETERAN

William Creamer the other day celebrated the seventieth anniversary of his service in the employ of a single New York store. He is nearly 81, and he went to work for Arnold, Constable & Co., when he was ten, and is still working there.

Famous men and women of what seems a distant past were among the customers whom this veteran of commerce has served. Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, Mrs. U. S. Grant, Mrs. Cleveland are among the ladies who bought things at his counter; he remembers a lady named Roosevelt who had her son, a chubby little boy, with her when she came to shop, and the store clerk has lived a dozen years and more since that little boy passed on after having been President of the United States.

I often envy the man who has the patience to stick to one job, to live simple and within his means and take life as it comes, but I have always commiserated them because their lives seemed to me to lack the essential elements of romance and venture. But William Creamer seems to be one of those rare souls who can find romance wherever he may be, and in his memories of the famous folks of old days he has something to enjoy in his old age that is more precious than anything money could buy.

The fool thinks others don't think.

Let's Hang Out The Welcome Sign

.... and

'Strike Up .... the BAND!'

When flags flutter to the breeze; when lively band music quickens the pulse; when a great city is in holiday attire; when streets are filled with a merry throng . . . it is then that the pride of citizenship in that particular town or community wells within the heart and one feels . . . "it's great to belong". But how many who have been a part of or witnessed such city, town or community activities have ever stopped to consider the source of that commonwealth's ability to put across progressive programs which make for the popularity and growth of the town?

The source, the origin . . . the very beginning of that town's ability to do things and grow was in the spirit of cooperation of its citizens . . . its business men, its civic leaders. They stuck together—and they did things. They helped each other to help themselves. They saw to it that when one of their citizens invested his money, his time and his ability in honest home effort that he was supported . . . that he received in return for all that he was giving—to make a better town in which to live.

A town is no bigger than its citizens make it. Likewise, a town is just as big as its citizens make it. All of which brings us down to the question, "how big do we want our town to be?" Are we satisfied with our town? Are there improvements we should like to have and enjoy . . . in civic life . . . in church life . . . in the schools . . . in our homes . . . in our business? Neither town nor individual can stand still. . . They must either go forward or slip back. Citizens of our town with investments in homes and property most surely do not want the town to slip back—to see their earnings and savings fritter away . . . and be lost.

Then support the home merchants; support home industry in every manner; keep jobs open and citizens employed; help yourself by helping your town, its business men, its civic leaders. Every dollar taken out of your town, to be spent in the shops of city stores . . . or with mail-order houses, is a dollar gone forever, so far as the development and growth of our town is concerned. Trade at home . . . Boost our town—hang out the welcome sign and, strike up the band.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

"ALLERGY"

When questions come thick and fast from the asthma and hay fever patients, the doctor has at least one umbrella to get under, that of "allergy." Allergy may be described as the "kick" obtained from different sorts of food, different individuals obtaining not by any means the same sort of kick.

For instance, the Irish potato may awaken terrible consequences in certain sensitive persons. No certain law has been discovered at this time which is obeyed by food allergies. But we are studying.

Asthma of the "bronchial" sort, may be due to reactions of certain kinds of food in that particular individual. Fish will provoke asthmatic attacks in some; oysters in others. When I am consulted by a confirmed sufferer from asthma, I have him write me a list of the articles he eats—and then require him to eat everything else but that; to keep the list before him constantly, and avoid every single item noted. In other words, to live on the things for awhile at least—that he don't like! This plan, with the line of remedies that relieve symptoms, sometimes works great good.

The advice is based on "food allergy" of course.

"Hay fever" is believed to be an allergy reaction. Its victims react to pollens on the nasal mucous membrane. If we inject pollen vaccine, it looks like the rational way to prevent hay fever. I have had success with pollen vaccines, but the patient usually waits till the season is on, and brings his sneezes to me when too late.

I had a patient, and they are common, who could not take quinine without developing a "rash" that was most annoying—a half grain of the drug would cause the volcano. Allergy, the scientist says. Just how one can take it, and another can't, is something yet undiscovered. Truly, allergy is worth considering.

HOME BUREAU

Homemakers May Earn Money

Plans are under way for engaging a booth at the State Fair where articles made by New York State women may be sold. Homemakers all over the state are being asked if they have or would care to make any articles to send to this sale. There is practically no restriction on the kind of articles that will be displayed except of course it would be impractical to include perishable things especially if they had to be sent any distance.

The idea is being promoted by the New York State Federation of Home Bureaus and the canvass of women is being taken under the separate county Home Bureau organizations. Never in the history of an organized group of women has it been so necessary for homemakers to increase the family income and this offers an opportunity for placing saleable articles before a large and representative group of buying public.

As soon as the committee in charge is assured that enough women throughout the state are interested in sending their prdoucts and that enough of the products may be supplied to stock the market throughout the entire week of the Fair, they will complete plans for leasing the booth.

Home Bureau members interested in sending articles to this sale at the State Fair should notify the Home Bureau office in Bath and they will receive complete information. The names of contributors will be forwarded to the committee in charge and also to the College of Home Economics. Articles to be placed on sale will be inspected by members of the Extension Staff at the college. All articles will be insured against fire and theft.

PAINTED POST H. S. PLAYS HERE FRIDAY

The Painted Post High School base ball team will play the Addison High School on the High School diamond, Friday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, and the game should be one of the best of the High School season. Painted Post defeated Addison by a narrow margin at that place two weeks ago and the local boys feel confident of turning the tables here tomorrow. Good sized crowds have been attending the High School games lately and with the big following that always comes along with the Painted Post teams, one of the largest crowds of the year is sure to be on hand.

Breaking loose from his stall in a burning building a blind horse owned by Oliver Culbertson of Sandy Hill near Dansville galloped to the farm home early Friday morning and there by pounding his hoofs upon the porch awoke the family to the immediate danger threatening them. Upon arising Mr. Culbertson found his horse barn, which is only a hundred yards from his home, a mass of flames. The horse which gave the alarm was so badly burned that it was necessary to shoot him.

It's the simplest trimming in the world and yet so absurdly easy to achieve! Just fringed edge of the material neatly stitched into place.

You can make use of this trimming on a dress of wool crepe or one of silk crepe with the satisfaction of knowing that you have the authority of Paris behind you. Simply cut strips of the material about one inch and a half wide and unravel at one side to obtain a fringe of about three-quarters of an inch. If you are using the fringe at the edge of a collar, peplum or cuff insert it between the outside piece and the facing so that only the fringe shows and then machine stitch along the collar, peplum or cuff just above the fringe. This gives a neat finish and incidentally keeps the fringe from fraying.

If you use the fringe as a trimming on bodice or sleeve cut the material so that you will have an overlapping section beneath which to insert the strip of fringe.

Dairymen's League Announce No Change

Independent Price Cutting Makes Future Uncertain. League Recommends No Change for Present

New York, May 25th—No change was recommended for June in the present schedule of prices for fluid milk and cream in the metropolitan market, according to announcement made by the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., following the regular May meeting of the board of directors of the Association.

Market conditions as reported by the Association indicate considerably less surplus in the market than usual at this time of the year. Independent dealers, however, who make no pretense at taking care of surplus continue the dumping of all their supplies in the market at almost any price so long as it is above butter price. As the flush season advances with consequent increase in surplus this price cutting if continued threatens to force a reduction in fluid prices and consequent lowered returns to producers of the entire Milk Shed. It is reported from some sections that independent producers have protested against this practice on the part of their dealers, but without effect.

Independent milk is being offered to stores in sections of Brooklyn as low as 4½c per quart in bulk or 5c per quart in bottles. This is at the rate of about $1.90 per can. Some independent dealers seem to be so sure of cheap supplies that they guarantee that the price to stores will not go above $2.00 per can for the next six months. There are stores in Brooklyn with signs in their windows advertising milk as low as 5c per quart.

The League and other large distributors in the wholesale trade are forced to meet this competition in order to protect and hold trade in sections where these price cuts prevail. This price cutting and competition in the wholesale store bottle trade is becoming more acute as surplus in the hands of independent dealers increases.

Children Receive First Communion

A class of seven children received Holy Communion at the 8:30 Mass at St. Catherin's Church Sunday morning followed by about 50 members of St. Catherine's Court of the Catholic Daughters.

Before the service started the Catholic Daughters marched into the church in a body, followed by the First Communion Class, whose names are as follows: Pauline Vona, Minnie Vona, Helen Lyons, Robert Kelly, John McAndrew, David Hovey and Robert Reagan.

The Boys' Choir, directed by Mrs. Francis Hill, sang during the Mass, with solo parts taken by David Little, Elmer Knepley and Ralph Vona, the latter singing during the Communion.

Father William J. Killackey, the pastor, said the Mass and administered the Sacrament.

Memorial Day Services To Be Held In Addison Monday

Line of march to form at one o'clock with colors, firing squad and band leading the way — Appropriate services to be held at cemetery—Charles L. Crane to deliver Address of the day.

A meeting of the American Legion was held May 19 in the Legion rooms when plans for the Memorial Day services were made. After much discussion it was decided to hold the parade at one o'clock and engage the Corning band to take part in the exercises. Charles L. Crane will give the address. The parade will start promptly at one o'clock from the city hall and march or drive to the cemetery and there hold exercises appropriate to the occasion. In case of rain other arrangements will be made. The Legion will furnish Color Guards and bearers. A dozen of the members have ordered new caps and this will be their first opportunity to display them.

Edward Ferguson, first vice commander assisted by Clair Chart, adjutant, will have general charge of arrangements. William Lewis will be marshal and have charge of the firing squad.

An endeavor will be made to have all the school children present and take part in the exercises by the singing of appropriate songs.

The order of march to the cemetery will be led by the colors and the firing squad. The band will come next, followed by the veterans of the Civil War in an automobile. The Spanish War veterans and members of the American Legion will march next, with the Boy Scouts and school children following. The various fraternal organizations participating will come after the children with towns people making up the remainder of the parade.

The services at the cemetery will open with greetings from the post commander of the Legion, Captain Auringer. The memorial prayer will be given by the Rev. Father Killackey, pastor of St. Catherine's Church. A song by the school, "America" will follow. The Memorial Day address of the afternoon will be given by Attorney Charles L. Crane. The floral ceremony will be observed, after which a salute to the dead will be given by the firing squad, and taps sounded by the Legion's bugler. A song by the school, "Star Spangled Banner" will conclude the program. The benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. John V. Axtell, pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

Poppies Make Fine Displays

Addison Unit A. L. A. was organized May 24, 1929 with 17 charter members. Mrs. Ruth Morgan, formerly of Addison, served as the first president. In 1930 Mrs. Morgan was succeeded by Miss Leanore Runyan and that year the membership increased to 29 members. Her successor was Mrs. H. E. Auringer with a membership for 1931 of 33.

Mrs. Maud Chart, this year's president, reports a membership of 41 members, and welfare work for Addison and vicinity amounting to $821.00, from October, 1931 to May 15, 1932. Editorials on Why We Wear the Poppy, were read in each of the churches at the morning service by the pastors. Beautiful baskets of large poppies were presented each church, for use in the morning service, by members of the Unit. At the Friday assembly of the Addison High School, an interesting story of the Meaning of the Poppy, was read by a member of the Training Class. A thought for Poppy Day has been read at the meeting of each organization in the village during the month. Three window displays were placed by the committee in charge Saturday forenoon. A fernery filled with bright red poppies and the prize poster as a back ground, placed in MacDowell's furniture store makes a very attractive display. Two adjoining windows in the former Schoonover store, are creating much interest. One arranged with American, German, and Austrian war relics, a large bowl of red poppies and American flags, gave a touch of color and make a very effective and interesting window.

The opposite window, arranged as a miniature Flanders Field, with white crosses, an American flag placed in front of each one and poppies scattered throughout the grassy plot and the adjourning space, small American flags making a border around the field, two U. S. soldiers stationed in front, and a Red Cross nurse on duty in the back ground, completed one of the most beautiful and effective window displays in this section.

The Poppy Sale in Addison starts Saturday morning, May 28th under the general chairmanship of Mrs. H. E. Auringer, and a score of workers, including members of the Unit, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and High School girls. Mrs. Maud Chart, president of the Unit, makes an appeal to the residents of Addison and vicinity to support the sale of poppies, and thus enable the Unit to carry on its welfare work.

Mr. and Mrs. John LaBarron were in Corning on business Saturday.

The Following Furnishes Food for Thought Read All of It or None

It is a gloomy moment in history. Not for many years—not in the lifetime of most men who read this paper—has there been so much grave and deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so incalculable as at this time. In our own country there is universal commercial prostration and panic, and thousands of our poorest fellow citizens are turned out against the approaching winter without employment, and without the prospect of it.

In France, the political caldron seethes and bubbles with uncertainty; Russia hangs, as usual, like a cloud, dark and silent upon the horizon of Europe; while all the energies, resources and influences of the British Empire are sorely tried, and are yet to be tried more sorely, in coping with the vast and deadly Indian insurrection, and with its disturbed relations in China.

It is a solemn moment, and no man can feel an indifference (which, happily, no man pretends to feel) in the issue of events.

Of our troubles no man can see the end. They are, fortunately, as yet mainly commercial; and if we are only to lose money, and by painful poverty to be taught wisdom—the wisdom of honor, of faith, of sympathy and of charity—no man need seriously to despair. And yet the very haste to be rich, which is the occasion of this widespread calamity; has also tended to destroy the moral forces with which we are to resist and subdue the calamity.

Good friends—let our conduct prove that the call comes to men who have large hearts, however narrowed their homes may be; who have nothing but manhood, strong in its faith in God, to rely upon; and whoever shows himself truly a God-fearing man now, by helping wherever and however he can, will be as blessed and beloved as a great light in darkness.

Now comes the remarkable fact. What you have just read was not written yesterday, about the condition of today—but is a verbatim reprint of an editorial which appeared in Harper's Weekly on October 10, 1857.

1857 . . . the same year that saw the opening of the bank which is now called "Mercantile-Commerce." July of that year was normal. September marked the beginning of depression. This editorial appeared in October. Seventeen months later, in March of 1859, business was back at normal again.

"Of our own troubles no man can see the end." They said it in 1857, and it has been said many times, before and since. Depressions have occurred in American business since the Revolutionary War, and every one has looked black, and seemed unending.

Every one has been followed by recovery—and prosperity.

MAN MADE THE TOWN

by RUBY M. AYRES

Eleventh Instalment

Diana, in love with a married man, Dennis Waterman, has a nervous collapse as a result of the gay life of London society. Her aunt, Mrs. Gladwyn, takes her to a doctor, who orders her to the country for a rest. Dr. Rathbone has a country home nearby. Dennis calls at the cottage, then goes away for a long trip. He writes from America that he is there with Linda, his wife. Diana finds herself becoming more and more interested in Dr. Rathbone, and questions her nurse, Miss Starling, about him. She also questions Jonas, a farm boy of the neighborhood, about a woman who lives in Dr. Rathbone's house. Her name is Rosalie. Then Diana meets Rosalie in the woods; she acts strangely and leaves Diana puzzled.

Soon after the meeting in the woods with Rosalie, Dr. Rathbone calls again at Diana's cottage.

A cablegram from Dennis arrives. He is returning from America. That interrupts what might have been a tender episode between Diana and the Doctor. He leaves; later Dennis cables that his return will be delayed. Diana, thirsting for love, turns her thoughts again to Dr. Rathbone. She is thinking of him now as "Donald." Regardless of the mysterious Rosalie, Diana resolves to see Dr. Rathbone. She goes to his house, but as she stands at the front door the doctor's big police dog leaps at her and she feels his teeth tearing at her throat.

Rathbone saves her from the beast, dresses her wounds and takes her to her own cottage. Both realize now that this is love, but Dr. Rathbone tells Diana that he can be no more than a friend, because of things in his life which he refuses to explain. He urges her to go back to London.

Dennis Waterman comes to the cottage to visit her, but she does not thrill at his presence as she once did. She goes back to London, and arranges to meet Dennis in a private room at a restaurant. While she is waiting for him Dennis' wife, Linda, comes in.

'I suppose Dennis never told you I offered to divorce him," she says.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"You—offered—then?"

Linda nodded. "Yes, and I really wanted my freedom. At first I did not, but afterwards—well, he is not the only man in the world, and I am still fairly young and attractive. Anyway, Dennis refused. I suppose it did not suit his plans. I assure you that he refused with outraged dignity. It was a most amusing performance."

"He—refused," Diana said again. She raised tragic eyes to Linda's unconcerned face. "Is that really the truth?" she asked painfully.

"Why should I trouble to lie about it?"

No, Linda would not trouble to lie about it, Diana knew.

Linda said with some feeling, "I'm sorry if I've hurt you. I'd hate to do that. I've been hurt myself so often and so much——"

She broke off, turning with swift welcome to greet a middle-aged gray-haired man who came through the swing doors, and Diana saw him take her hand, heard him say, "Well, my dear," saw the look they exchanged, and knew that she was quite forgotten.

CHAPTER XVI

They went on into the restaurant and when they had gone Diana seemed to come to life. She must get away, that was her one panic-stricken thought. She must get away before Dennis came. She could never bear to meet him any more.

She would go back to the Creature—she would be safe with her. She thought of the little cottage and of her own room with almost passionate longing; not soon enough could she get away from London.

She sat far back in a corner of the cab, terrified still lest some freak of Fate should bring her face to face with Waterman. She only breathed freely when she was safely at the railroad station.

"What time is the next train, please?"

"One due now, miss—first stop Guildford. If you run you will just catch it."

Diana ran. Her long skirts hampered her, and she caught them up anyhow, with impatient inelegance; she would die rather than miss that train.

The guard had already blown his whistle, but a friendly porter dashed forward and wrenched open a carriage door for her, assisting her with clumsy willingness.

Someone shouted peremptorily, "Stand away there; stand away."

But Diana only laughed hysterically, as a man who was already seated in the carriage sprang to his feet and caught her firmly by her shoulders as she tripped over her long frock and almost fell.

He began to say, "That was a narrow shave——" then broke off to speak her name in hoarse amazement.

"Diana!" It was Donald Rathbone.

Diana collapsed onto the seat opposite him, breathless and exhausted.

She moved her head from side to side with a dull feeling of suffocation, and Rathbone said quickly:

"How far have you been running? What is the matter, Diana?"

"Nothing." She laughed harshly. "Oh, nothing, except that once more I've discovered that life is only a rotten, beastly sham."

He let that pass, and she went on in quick, excited tones:

"We're always wrong about people, no matter how well we think we know them. I'll never believe in anyone again as long as I live."

She had been wrong about Linda too; somehow she had always respected Dennis's wife and envied her her poise and integrity even though she had once so foolishly hated her, and now she had discovered that Linda was playing the same game as the rest of the world, meeting another man secretly, lying about it to her husband (not that that mattered!) in a fugitive chase after the elusive sham called Love which, even if you caught up with it, never gave you any real peace or satisfaction, but only turned to rend you.

"I'll never believe in anyone again as long as I live," Diana cried, passionately, and covering her face with her hands she began to sob.

Rathbone sat very still, his head averted. He could see that Diana was utterly overwrought and knew that she must have received a severe shock, but he saw it was not yet the moment for him to speak, and presently she went on, almost incoherent with her bitter sobbing:

"People don't even love you honestly. . . . It's not you they think about at all . . . only themselves. . . . Men don't care what becomes of any woman so long as they get what they want. . . . We're just here . . . to be made use of. . . . It isn't love . . . it's all a pretense . . . just hateful . . . damned . . . beastliness. . . . You're all the same . . . not one of you worth a single tear . . . and yet we go on . . . hoping . . . do for you."

"And . . . now?" she breathed.

She felt his arms tighten around her for a moment, but he did not answer her whispered question, and she repeated it, changing her position a little, trying to see his face, but he kept it hidden against her.

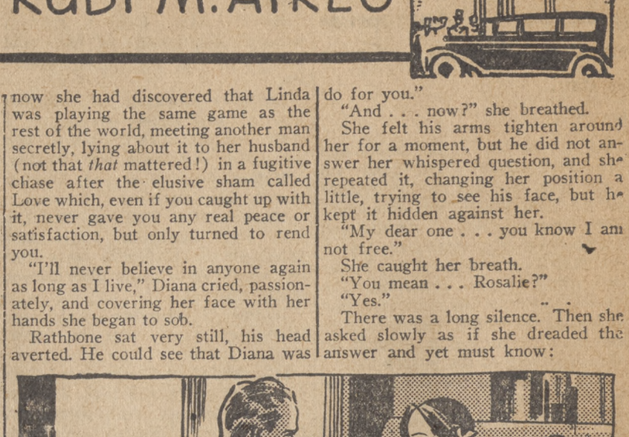
"My dear one . . . you know I am not free."

She caught her breath.

"You mean . . . Rosalie?"

"Yes."

There was a long silence. Then she asked slowly as if she dreaded the answer and yet must know:



"Men don't care what becomes of any woman so long as they get what they want."

"Who—who—is she?"

She could feel the heavy throbbing of his heart against her own.

"She's my . . . wife . . . Diana."

CHAPTER XVII

Diana's arm fell from Rathbone's shoulder, and for a moment she lay quite still, her mind a blank, her body limp; then with a swift movement she slipped from his arms, falling back helplessly onto the seat behind her.

His wife! Such a possibility had never crossed her mind.

She never doubted the truth of what he had just said—Rathbone would never lie to her.

His wife!

Presently Rathbone touched her hand, rousing her.

"This is our station, Diana."

She stood up obediently, folding her coat warmly around her.

Hobson was on the platform.

Rathbone spoke to him.

"I'll drive myself. Can you get a lift back?"

"Yes, sir."

Presently they were alone again, driving through the quiet roads.

Rathbone had not turned in the direction of the cottage, but Diana hardly noticed; she sat beside him, lost in a kind of stupor.

Rosalie was his wife; that meant eternal separation; she could not find room for any other thought in her bewildered mind.

Presently they were out in the country in a narrow road with trees overhead and hedges on either side; the lights of the car lamps threw each separate object into glaring relief before it swirled past them again into blackness.

Diana had let the window down, and the cool air, sweet from its flight over fields and valleys, blew on her tired face, reviving her a little.

The quiet hum of the engine seemed to be saying the same thing to her over and over again:

"She's his wife . . . she's his wife . . . she's his wife," till she felt that she must cry out in protest.

Then Rathbone drew the car to the roadside, and stopped.

For a moment he sat silent at the wheel then he asked:

"Will you believe what I am going to tell you, Diana?"

She moved her head in listless assent.

"Oh, yes."

His quiet voice was a little shaken as he went on:

"First I want you to know that I love you with all my heart and soul and that I should count myself the most . . . most blest among men if I could ask you to be my wife . . . but I can't . . . I——" he stopped, continuing again with increasing difficulty: "Then I want you to know about . . . Rosalie. I have never told any living soul but you—I shall never tell anyone else. It all happened so long ago—twelve years, soon after the war. She—she was the wife of a friend of mine—a decent fellow from a man's point of view, but a man who should never have married. . . . He didn't understand women or even try to. . . . She wasn't happy with him. I was a young man then, and she—she was kind enough to like me. . . . I am not going to pretend to you that I was not attracted to her. I was."

Style Specialist Tells Women Economy in Clothing is Vogue

"Women do not need to spend money to make themselves attractive and to be stylish" said Mrs. Tobey talking to a large group of women from Steuben, Schuyler and Yates counties on Monday, April 11th. A woman's appearance is affected more by the time and thought she has spent on herself and the planning of her clothes than upon the actual garments themselves. In any case being stylish does not cost anything and to illustrate this Mrs. Toby said, "Being up to the minute includes little things like, combing your hair carefully, wearing your hat at the right angle, and standing correctly."

Throughout the entire day these were the special thoughts that Mrs. Tobey brought out over and over again in an effort to impress women with the idea that no one can justify their unattractive appearance by saying that they have no money or very little money to spend.

Mrs. Tobey began with the hair and skin, and discussed personal care, foundation and undergarments and then outer clothing. Here are some of the points of special interest.

To be stylish this year the hair should be glossy and healthy looking. If waved the waves should look soft and natural and should run in up and down lines around the head. In combing the hair it should be swept back from the face and only brought out on the forehead enough to soften the line and make a very high forehead look narrower. There is more bobbed hair than ever, but the bob is long and feminine looking and the hair lies close to the head and at least half or more of the ears should show. Long hair should be thinned out and should not be longer than six inches. It should be combed with one or two very flat knots at the nape of the neck or in a French swirl. There can not be any large bunches of hair anywhere on the head as hat crowns are very small and tight fitting.

The hair is so very important this year because hats are worn on top of the head showing from two to three inches of hair at the back and coming forward on the forehead low over the right eye. On the right the hat should come just to the top of the ear and on the left crown should stop at least one inch above the ear. All types of hats are being worn including the berets; the cuff hat with upturned brim; and the wider brimmed hats for summer. Every hat, however, has the shallow crown, and all hats show the face and hair. Felts will be worn all summer and all sorts of straws are very good.

The best rule to follow is to match the hat and the outside garment, coat or suit; or match the coat and trim with the color of blouse, dress or some accessory. The third choice is to match the hat with the dress or blouse. Hats this season are very gay looking and may have flat feather ornaments or very tailored flowers.

In talking about care of the skin Mrs. Tobey said, "It is the business of every woman, no matter what her troubles, to look as if she had no burdens. Don't drag the rest of the world down by your looks."

Very simple skin care was suggested, using a good cold cream once a day and then adding enough color to give a healthy appearance and to brighten the eyes.

Garments this year are made for a certain type of figure with prominent shouders, a flat diaphragm, and a normal waistline. The figure may be aided a great deal by proper posture and by exercising the muscles to make them firm and strong to help hold the body perfectly.

Dresses, coats and suits all stress the width of shoulders and chest and this is done with trimming, capes, scarfs, bows, etc. All garments are pulled back over the diaphragm and are fitted down over the hipline. The waistline is normal or a bit higher and the fullness at the bottom of the skirt is added with flat pressed pleats or circular fullness. Hemlines are straight and below the middle calf, two inches longer for informal and instep lengh for very formal.

Sleeve and sleeve effects are very important because arms are covered for all occasions. Sleeves may be tailored, they may be leg of mutton and they may have trimming that widens the shoulders but not the hips.

The best materials are dull and rough, and cotton and wool are used extensively. There are many mesh, open work, diagonal and corded materials and sheer materials are back again.

Colors for street in the order of preference are: black, blue, beige and brown. Plain colors are best although there are quite a few prints, and stripes are good.

Jackets are still very popular as are capes and scarfs used with practically every coat, collarless effects are frequently seen as well as the collar with high reveres. Many buttons are used and collar and cuff effects dress up many very plain coats.

Suits are very good and will probably continue to be shown in the fall. Spring suits have short jackets but the fall suits are coming in with longer or three-quarters coats. All coats fit well, many have yokes and capes and the unlined coat is a new departure. Polo coats in all colors, using many variations are being widely shown and the redingote, the unlined coat with dress, or coat dress, is still very popular.

Shoes are simple, black, brown or navy being the best colors. Oxfords for sport and street but pumps and one strap slippers are best for all around use. Light hose are worn as are navy blue and many kinds of mesh. In choosing mesh hose, street demands the small mesh and for evening the larger mesh or the lace.

This year is an excellent one for restyling garments as Mrs. Tobey brought out because there are so many combinations. A dress or coat may be a combination of two colors, contrasting jackets are worn with many of the dress or skirt and blouse combinations and dresses may combine different materials as well as different colors.

TELL ME AN INDIAN STORY

Dr. E. A. Bates Cornell
(Copyright, 1932)

WHY DOGS DO NOT TALK

This is what happened when the first palefaces came among the Esopus Indians, about three hundred moons ago at the 'place of wild geese' or Kerhonkson. In those days every Indian boy and girl had a dog and they used to teach their dogs all sorts of tricks. Then, too, the Indians say the dogs could talk in those days and the children had great sport teaching the dogs stories and then listening to them repeat the stories to their owners. Of course, all the stories used well chosen words, for there are no bad or slang words in any American Indian language.

Happy were the boys and girls and their talking dogs in those days, until finally palefaces came with big canoes which had white wings. The dogs at first sniffed at the newcomers, but the palefaces gave the dogs game to eat so they became good friends.

One day after a dog had made a visit to the new log cabin of the white man, the Indian boy asked his dog what he had heard on his visit and forthwith the dog began to say all sorts of bad words that he had learned from the paleface.

The Great Spirit in the sky heard the dog utter these bad words and called on He No, the thunderer, to display his power. He No gave such a mighty roar in the mountains that all the dogs became frightened and lost their power to talk ever after. So, when you see your dog wag his tail, remember the Indians say it is because he used the bad words of the white man in the 'place of wild geese' many, many moons ago.

Bull Owned by Steuben Farmer Wins Honors

A New York Bull owned by John W. Hollis of Hornell has just received the honor of being entered in the Advanced Register of the American Guernsey Cattle Club, Peterboro, N. H., three of his daughters having recently completed official records. The bull, Langwater Claymore 120913, is the sire of Belle's Grand-daughter 275890 with a record of 7361.8 pounds of milk and 366.3 pounds of fat in class GGG; Buttercup's Betsy of Riveredge 280816 with a record of 7422.1 pounds of milk and 370.6 pounds of fat in class GGG, and Lady Dorrman of Riveredge 269893 with a record of 7079.1 pounds of milk and 387.5 pounds of butter fat in class GGG. The bull also has fourteen registered daughters and nine registered sons. He was sired by Langwater Steadfast 31672 and his dam was Upland's Mary 93170.

The total imports of milk from Canada in 1931 would furnish New York City a half-day's supply.

There's Money in a Garden — By A. J. Pratt

Starting Asparagus and Rhubarb

If you'd gain from little labor—
Sparrer-gras and rhubarb, too,
Give enough for home and neighbor,
Grow the years and seasons thru!

Perennial vegetables are beyond the reach of the family that moves every year, but no garden is complete without an asparagus bed and a few rhubarb plants.

Mary Washington is the best variety of asparagus to grow. Since it is a slow and difficult task to start asparagus from seed, most of us should buy one-year-old roots. Fifty are enough for a small family garden. The latest experimental work indicates that eight inches is deep enough to set asparagus plants. Make the trench for them about three inches deeper than that; put two inches of well rotted manure in the bottom, cover with an inch of soil. Place the roots from a foot to a foot and a half apart in the row, covering them with two inches of soil. As the plants grow, gradually fill in the rest of the trench. Cuttings should not be begun until the third year.

Rhubarb (pie plant) can be brought into bearing much quicker. Roots started this spring will begin to yield pie this fall and next spring. Once started, the roots should be taken up and divided every three to five years. If this is done in the fall, the extra roots can be forced in the cellar for winter rhubarb, after they have been left outside to freeze until Thanksgiving. MacDonald rhubarb has stalks of a deep red color, and makes attractive sauce or pie-filling.

After Gasoline Bootleggers

When the gasoline tax was raised from two to three cents a gallon fear was expressed that it would result in increased bootlegging in it—selling without the formality of paying the tax—and the Legislature appropriated $25,000 to pay additional examiners. Eight of these have been appointed by the Tax Department and after a season of training in Albany will be sent out to examine books of gasoline distributors and check on filling stations. One of the new laws requires every gasoline filling station to be licensed after July 1st and pay a fee of $2.00. Another requires wholesale distributors to keep records open to examination, and also provides every concern or person transporting gasoline to keep exact records. It is hoped in this way to check so carefully the gasoline up to the time it reaches the consumer that bootlegging will be reduced to a minimum.

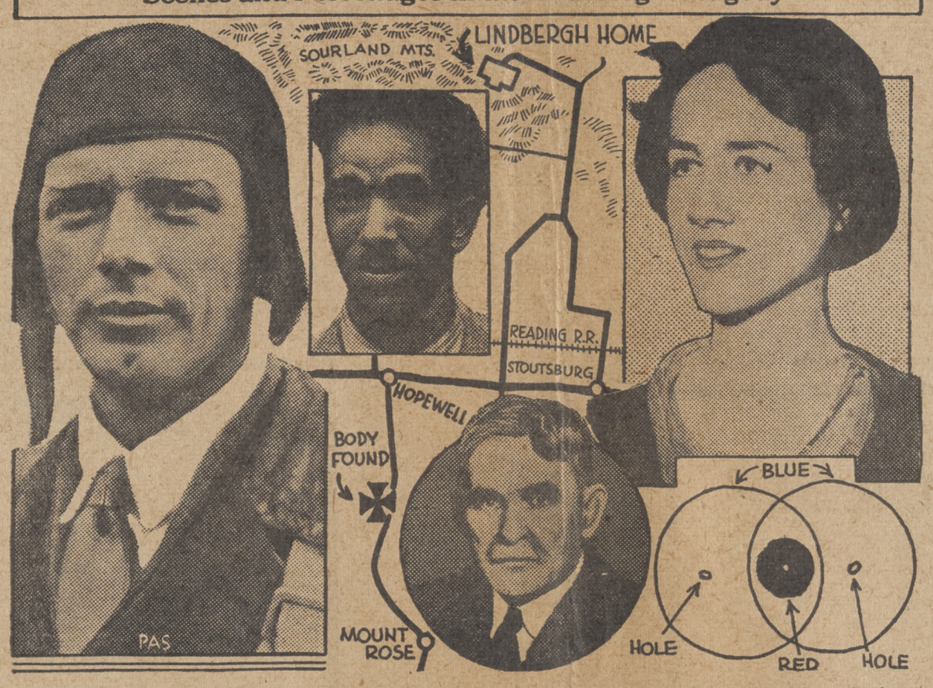
Scenes and Personages in the Lindbergh Tragedy



Map shows where the body of little Charlie Lindbergh was found, by William Allen, a Negro, five miles from his home. The circle device was signed to the ransom note left by the kidnappers, who said the money should be given to whoever showed that. Dr. J. F. Condon gave $50,000 to a man who produced the baby's sleeping suit, but the baby had been killed before that. The pictures of "Lindy" and "Anne" are the last ones made before the kidnapping.

Indications Point To Possibility of Mayor Walker's Dismissal

Albany, May 24—The investigation of New York City is approaching its climax. It is getting very close to Mayor Walker. In fact, he has been already involved by the testimony. It has been shown that after a conference with the Mayor in Atlantic City a New York broker who was heavily interested in a taxicab company conceived such a high admiration for Mr. Walker that a little later he voluntarily sent him $26,000 in bonds—including several of the taxicab company in which he was interested. It just happened that the Mayor then had under consideration a program of taxicab regulation for the city, which the broker's company very much wanted to see go through, and which incidentally, would not make the Mayor's bonds any less valuable. It was a mere coincidence, of course, that the program which the Mayor put into effect was exactly the one desired by the taxicab broker, tho it was opposed by other taxicab interests.

* * *

The Smoother Tammany Type

It will be observed that this matter was handled in rather clever fashion. It would probably be impossible to directly prove that there was any such thing as buying the influence of the Mayor in behalf of the taxicab company. When the Mayor goes on the stand, as he is expected to do this week, he will doubtless have a pretty explanation to offer. And yet there is only one conclusion to be drawn from the facts presented. The incident is a pretty good example of the operations of the more clever Tammany workers. In the lower ranks, as revealed by the present investigation, there is no such finesse. The victims are bluntly told that they will have to pay, and how much. And the victims are many.

Likely to Ask Mayor's Removal

The opinion in political circles here is that on the basis of the above incident and others of similar character Judge Seabury will ask the Governor to remove Mr. Walker from the office of Mayor of the City of New York, as that power under the constitution resides with the Chief Executive of the State. It is the opinion also that the Governor will be rather glad to do so; glad, because his advisers believe that it will strengthen him with the Democrats of other parts of the country. They have little hope that Tammany will support him anyhow, so there would be nothing to lose. And they figure that if he would accompany the removal by some high-sounding statement of his desire for clean government the public might forget that in all this New York investigation he has done only those things he was practically compelled to do. But things are now a little different. Walker has been thoroughly discredited and by ousting him the Governor might get some political glory without any danger. The New York Evening Post expressed it very aptly a few days ago when it said: "We predict that if Judge Seabury gets Mayor Walker down, Governor Roosevelt will put him out."

* * *

Practical Farmer Chosen

Albany, May 24—The Council of Agriculture and Markets pursued a course which will undoubtedly meet with approval when it promoted a practical farmer and a man of wide and successful experience in the department to succeed Commissioner Berne A. Pyrke, who will go out of office on July 1. The man chosen is Charles H. Baldwin, for the past eleven years in charge of all the farms owned by New York State, which comprise some 40,000 acres and are valued at three and a half million dollars. Previous to that Mr. Baldwin had managed the State Farms at Oxford and at St. Lawrence State Hospital and in all has served eighteen years in the department he is now called upon to head. Few men are more widely and favorably known in agricultural circles.

* * *

Of Long Line of Farmers

Mr. Baldwin comes naturally by his love for farming and his ability to carry on and manage it, as he represents the eighth generation in direct line that have tilled the soil, in earlier days in Connecticut, but for a century and a third in New York. The Commissioner-elect was born on a farm near Cortland in 1886. He attended country school and Cortland State Normal, and taught five years, but got the education that has been most valuable to him in working with the soil itself. In addition to the service to New York State above mentioned he for some time had supervision of the big farm of the Carnation Milk Company near Seattle, Washington. He has been President of the New York Holstein-Friesian Association for seven years and is serving his third term as President of the New York Agricultural Society, but will resign both these positions upon assuming his new office. Mr. Baldwin is a trustee of Cornell Unievrsity and active in Grange and Farm Bureau circles. His family consists of a wife and five children and they reside in Albany. In politics he is a Republican, like the retiring Commissioner, Mr. Pyrke, but has not been active in party matters.

* * *

No Checks For Conscience Fund

There is proof that quite a few people in New York State still have a conscience. Every once in a while the State receives a remittance accompanied by an unsigned communication saying it represents money out of which the State had been cheated. Nearly all of these remittances come to the Tax Department, most of them from people who tried to do old Father Knickerbocker out of part of his dues and later regretted it. These sums are rarely large and they always come in cash. To send a check or a postal order would reveal the identity of the sender, and only in very rare instances has the defaulter been willing to do that.

* * *

You Take Your Choice

The famous New England weather was never more variable than the outgivings of the political prophets concerning the Democratic nomination for President. On a few things, however, they seem to agree pretty well: That Governor Roosevelt will have at the start a majority of the delegates, which will give him control of the important committees; that he won't have the two-thirds required to win; that much of this support is of the band wagon variety and will desert him on any definite sign that he can't win; that the opposition includes a lesser proportion of the same kind of support, which will flock to the Governor if he looks like a victor; that Smith and other leaders, by raising questions as to his soundness on fundamental policies, have made it more or less dangerous to nominate him; that Roosevelt's followers are likely to try to abolish the two-thirds rule, but not likely to succeed, since many similar attempts have failed; and, finally, that tho the Governor's chances have been declining, they are still far above those of any other candidate, say around 50-50, with no other single individual better than about one in five.

To Campaign for Higher Taxes

The road contractors, cement manufacturers and others who have failed in their effort to impose more taxes upon the people through a special session of the Legislature for their own profit now follow the course usual in such cases and threaten to get revenge at the polls next fall. Presumably they will support all candidates who favor higher taxes and oppose those favoring lower ones. Inasmuch as quite a few of the contractors and manufacturers who would profit from their plan live outside the State, they naturally don't care how high the taxes go.

SAY YOU SAW IT ADVERTISED IN THIS PAPER

This Week in Washington

BY RADFORD MOBLEY
AUTOCASTER WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, D. C., May 24—Now that it seems that Congress is proceeding intelligently and efficiently toward the reduction of government expenses and the production of a tax bill which will neither hamper business nor impose too heavy a burden unon the ordinary man, more attention is being given here to programs of immediate relief of distress and unemployment and the restoration of commodity prices to a point where their production will again be profitable.

In spite of ex-Governor Smith's impassioned plea over the radio for the sales tax, it is regarded here as doubtful whether its advocates will succeed in putting that back into the tax bill. It is also doubtful whether the restoration of income tax schedules to the high point of war times will be in the tax bill if finally adopted. It is pointed out convincingly that those high taxes were based upon high profits, and were designed to curb profiteering in the production and sale of munitions of war, by taking most of the excess profits for the Treasury. With production at a low ebb and profits nil, the effect of war-time taxes would be extremely injurious and would delay the resumption of industrial operations. The sales tax is regarded by politicians as dangerous, because it is a tax which everybody who pays it knows he is paying. Exactly the same people would pay the sales tax as pay other kind of taxes, but it is the idea of a certain type of politician that if he advocates a tax that the ordinary voter has to pay, then the vote will be against him.

* * *

Possibly the most important subject on which Congress is beginning to concentrate is ways and means of increasing commodity prices. It has under consideration the Goldsborough bill, instructing the Federal Reserve System to take immediate steps to restore commodity prices without telling them how to do it. As one banker commenting on the bill, said: "I would hate to be ordered to run a hundred yards in ten seconds flat." In other words, the Goldsborough bill is regarded as merely the expression of a desire which is shared by everybody, but the realization of which is not provided for.

* * *

There is beginning to be general agreement that the only way to restore commodity prices is to make money cheaper. All sorts of schemes have been suggested, from issuing thousands of millions of paper dollars based on nothing but government credit, which would correspond to the scheme of the old "Greenback" party, on which Horace Greeley went down to defeat for the Presidency in 1872, to the free and unlimited coinage of silver, on which Mr. Bryan was defeated in 1896. It is extremely doubtful whether any such project as either of these can get through both Houses and pass the President without a veto.

It is quite possible, however, and seems to be more probable as the days pass, that definite steps will be taken to restore silver to its money position which it occupied just before the war. This will have to be done by international agreement, since it involves the currency position of India and of China, the debasement of the subsidiary silver coinage of Europe and a hundred other angles affecting international trade.

* * *

The political sensation of the moment is the flat refusal of Owen D. Young to permit his name to be presented as a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination. There is no doubt that this will throw a great many more delegates to Newton D. Baker, who is regarded as being the same type of man as Mr. Young, and Mr. Baker may, therefore, develop unexpected strength early in the proceedings of the Democratic National Convention.

* * *

Whether Congress will succeed in getting its big program through in time for the final adjournment before the June conventions becomes more and more questionable. The outlook is for a summer session after the nominations have been made.

Uncle Ab says the world would be twice as good a place if half the time spent in putting things off were spent in doing what we know should be done.

U. S. Bonds Over Subscribed Several Times

Recent sales of United States bonds, which were over-subscribed several times, indicate that there is plenty of money available for investment in these best of all securities. There is no question, therefore, that a billion or two billion dollars of money could be raised by a bond issue; and the proposal to float such an issue and use the proceeds to put men to work on public improvements, either nationally or by loans to the states, is gaining supporters. It is not at all unlikely that something of the sort may be done before Congress adjourns.

Leaders of both parties are pretty well determined, however, that this form of relief must be based on productive improvements and not result in the tying up of the government's credit and the money and labor in places from which it cannot be directly repaid. There are many such projects which, in the light of past experience, ought to be able to repay such loans and retire the bonds in a reasonable time.

HERD OF FOUR DEER SEEN AT TRACY CREEK

The Rev. J. V. Axtell reported to the Advertiser that he saw four deer near the Tracy Creek road last Friday morning. The flock consisted of one doe and three bucks. When sighted, the deer were grazing unconcernedly in the declevity where the old road was abandoned a short time ago near the Lewis Hill farm.

JEFFERSON CHASE

The funeral of Jefferson Chase was held from his late home on Steuben street Wednesday afternoon, the Rev. H. E. Kenrick assisted by the Rev. John V. Axtell officiated. Burial was made in Addison Rural cemetery.

The death of Jefferson Chase at the age of 61, occurred at his home Sunday afternoon after a long illness, having been confined to his bed since early in January.

Deceased is survived by his widow and three daughters, Mrs. Ernest Shelanskey, Mrs. Raymond Stewart and Mrs. Horace Stiles.

Harold Hibbard In Trouble Again

Harold Hibbard, 21, who was arrested here Sunday by officer Raymond Brooder of Corning on a charge of passing worthless checks in that city, waived examination when he was arraigned before City Judge Holland B. Williams and was ordered held for the grand jury, for second degree forgery.

Hibbard was taken to Bath jail. It is alleged that he attempted to pass a worthless check at the Phillips clothing store on West Market street several weeks ago and that he later succeeded in obtaining cash and merchandise on a worthless paper passed at the Serrins Brothers clothing establishment on East Market street.

In court, young Hibbard admitted both charges but stated he had made partial restitution for the check which he succeeded in passing. He spent Sunday night in the city jail where he was visited by friends and relatives. District Attorney George W. Pratt stated that Hibbard is at present under parole from an Illinois institution.

The check he passed at the Phillips store was given on a Westfield bank, while the one given Serrins Brothers was on the Addison bank. Hugh Varn was engaged for his attorney.

Six Nominated For School Loyalty Medal

The annual nominations for the loyalty medal for Addison High School students was held at the weekly assembly last Friday. The loyalty medal is given each year to the senior who, in the opinion of the high school body, has done the most for the school during his four-year course. Only seniors are eligible for the medal, and in accordance with the custom established the past two years, members of the junior class made the nominating speeches.

Those nominated were Roy Teachman, Alice Orr, Mary Reagan, George Hopper, Mary Tobin and Albert Webster. Dorothy Hallet acted as chairman of the assembly meeting. The election is carried on by ballots, which are being cast in a box in the principal's office Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week. The result of the election will be announced at the assembly period tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. William Olmstead, daughter Irma, and Mrs. Eva Groves and daughter Marie were callers in Corning, Monday.

For the convenience of our many patrons living in the outlying districts — we will be open every evening during the week from 7:00 to 9:00 o'clock.

THE PATTISON NATIONAL BANK
Elkland, Penna.

In selecting a bank, look well to the strength of the institution. Capital and surplus make up the financial strength; careful, conservative, yet progressive business men as officers and directors make the moral strength.
